My current SM already knows that this is my plan and has told me to start calling the stores in this area and then to let you know when I have found one that will take me as a transfer. That's a stupid question, when I say these stores, basically, I just show up to the SM and say I'd like to transfer to your store? Is there anything else I need to know before calling? I've been working in a corporate store for four months already, I really love my store, but I live a little far away. I'll be fine at school in the autumn and my 30-minute commute would become a one-hour journey if I keep working in my shop. I wondered when I would be able to transfer? And how would you be able to start the process / find a store? Page 2Posted byu/[deleted]4 years ago 7 comments On On Do I find the form to submit a transfer application? I've already called the store I want to transfer to and they told me I can start on the next schedule as soon as my current SM approves it, but I can't find the form to officially put it. I haven't even informed him that I'm transferring yet (I told him a couple of weeks ago that we were looking to move, but nothing since then), but I'm so ready to leave this store. Store.
